

- person A: Who is the last person in the queue to buy a new iPhone?
- person B: It's me.
- person A: I wish I had arrived earlier.
- person B: Are you kidding me? The first person in line came here two days ago. I would have brought a tent if I had known.
- Do you have two free days to wait in line? Do you have a job?
- person B: No, I don't need to work. My parents provide for me.
- person A: If I were rich, I would travel the world.
- person B: If I had a new iPhone, I would do so and take beautiful photos.
- person A: So, why don't you just buy a place at the beginning of the line?
- person B: Who would ever sell me their place?
- person A: Well, if you promise to pay for their iPhone...
- person B: I don't need an iPhone that bad. If only someone would drop a bag full of money right about now..
- a bag of money falls from the nearby building
- person B: This is crazy! I insist you come to Vegas with me! We need to exploit your luck!
- person A: If only it were that easy. I still have a job to go to, remember? And why don't you buy a place at the front?
- person B: I'd rather wait with everyone. My life coach told me it would be a good humbling exercise.
- person A: You... have a life coach?
- person B: Here, I can show you her picture.
- person A: Wait. Isn't this a new iPhone? Why are you waiting in line, then? You'd better explain yourself!
- person B: if I had to do something more important today, I would do it only with my new iPhone.
- person A: And if you are going to find other options after this boring day, I wish there would be some job for you. There will be too many people with new shiny devices...
