

Green Book

KASIANENKO VERA

Where and when is it set?

The action of the movie "Green Book" is set in the United States during the 1960s, a time marked by intense racial tensions and discrimination.

One of the most striking aspects of the film is the depiction of civil rights protest. The film effectively portrays the deep-rooted racial prejudice that civilians often faced in that era.

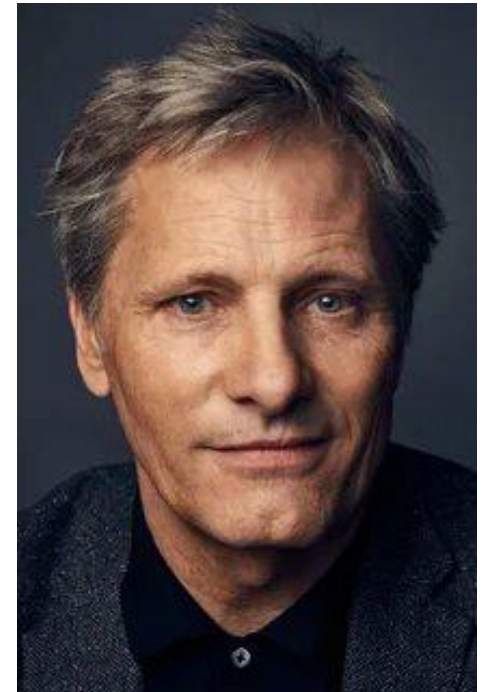

What is it about?

"Green Book" tells the story of the friendship between Don Shirley, an African-American pianist, and Tony Lip, an Italian-American bouncer who becomes Don's chauffeur. Together, they embark on a concert tour in the racially segregated Deep South, where they encounter racism and prejudice reminiscent of the problems faced by refugees.

Main characters

- Don Shirley, the pianist, portrayed by Mahershala Ali.
- Tony Lip, the driver, portrayed by Viggo Mortensen.

Why did I enjoy it?

I enjoyed "Green Book" for its powerful exploration of themes such as racism, friendship and tolerance.

It showcases how the characters evolve and grow during their journey, as they challenge their own prejudices and biases.

Memorable scene

One of the most memorable scenes is when Don and Tony found themselves at a Southern diner, where Don faced discrimination.

Don was surprised that he will play in the same hall on stage, but he was not allowed to have dinner here.

They were going to a black bar for dinner where Don played the piano with a jazz band.

"★★★★★

THE GREAT SUCCESS OF 'GREEN BOOK' LIES IN THE STRAIGHTFORWARD WAY IT RECOGNIZES SEISMIC CHANGE IN THE INCREMENTAL TURNING OF A HUMAN HEART."
